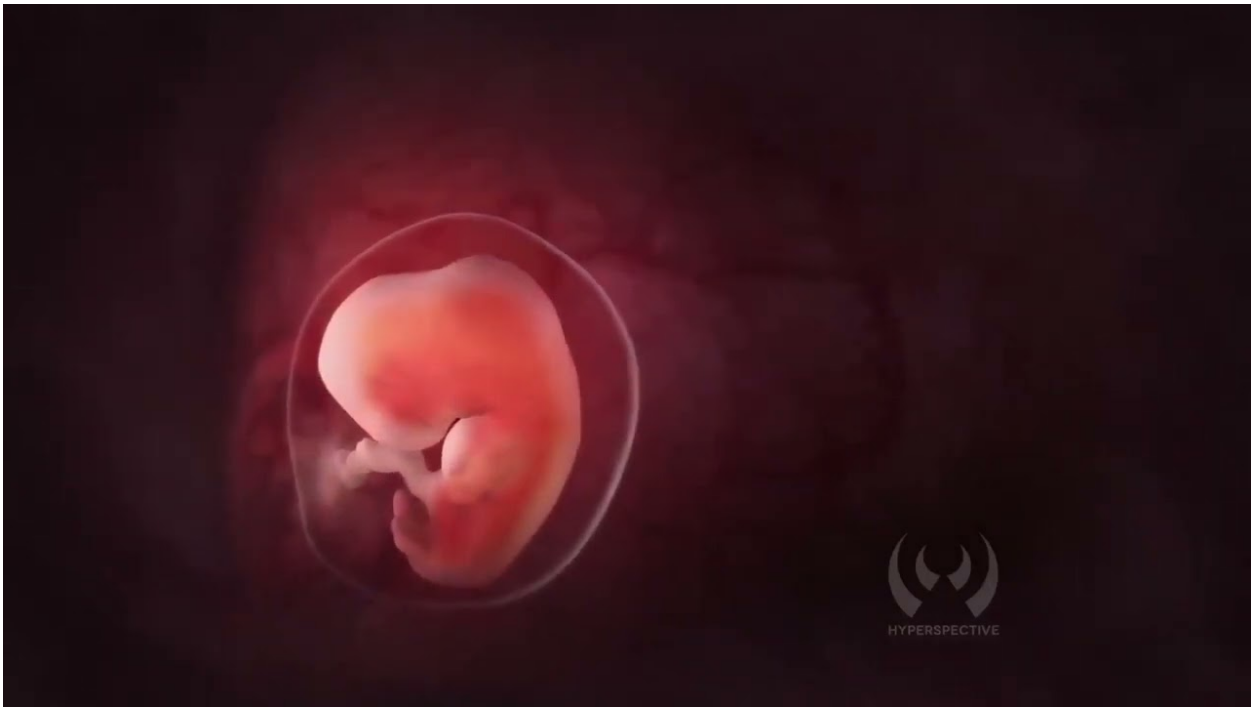
(5 short proofs of life after death)

David Guilliams

Foreword

To get straight to the point, let me immediately give you the first and easiest proof of life after death, the other four will be discussed later.
If an eight-month-old baby in the womb would become one day younger every day, it would eventually die, which means that death comes before life as well.
This is even clearer in this YouTube clip:



If someone asks ChatGPT if there is an official proof of life after death, it will immediately write that there isn't one. This can lead to many conclusions about how life on Earth works. People who claim that there is life after death are not believed by the others who form a majority. As long as there is no verbal proof, the majority will always be in charge according to the principle that there is no life after death.
However, on this planet, no one talks about the conclusion that crimes go unpunished. Those who commit a crime and can evade justice until their death have succeeded in their goal because there is no life after death so they cannot be punished after death.

That is the profile of the bad people on Earth. They think they will get away with it until they die and end up successful.
People who believe in life after death are by definition good people. Because those who believe in life after death believe in the impossible and therefore believe in being punished after death if they have committed crimes for which they were not punished before they died.
All of this makes the need for verbal proof very clear. When bad people are, by definition, aware that a crime does not go unpunished. If they are not punished in this life, then in the next...

A world of atheists

In this chapter, an argument is put forward that demonstrates that more than 99% of people are atheists, including those who call themselves believers and promote themselves as such.
Because what does believing in an Almighty mean?
It means that you also have to consider the possibility that it is bad rather than good. An Almighty can afford to be bad because no one has the power to punish an Almighty. Anyone who tries cannot stand up to the Almighty power.
If you are a believer, you have to consider the scenario that the Almighty might send everyone to eternal fire for fun at some point. And when one takes into account something indescribable like that, one doesn't have time to imagine oneself as a frivolous believer who is not affected by that scenario.
With this knowledge, proof of life after death is more than welcome, as it can make this bad world, which is almost entirely made up of atheists, better when atheists, such as religious terrorists, are no longer who they used to be.
It should also be noted that if a bad Almighty sends everyone to eternal fire, it does so after ensuring that everyone has experienced an equal amount of good and bad moments. And then it goes back in time to start on a new inhabited planet, whose life forms end up in eternal fire for fun. And the total number of life forms is then duplicated, if applicable, so that all life forms have experienced all scenarios on inhabitable planets before being sent to eternal fire.
In this regard, the following dialogue is also very instructive.
-The Almighty Devil is very powerful, but thanks to my actions, it will send me to eternal fire later than if I did nothing.
-You are supposedly smarter than the Almighty Devil, but you will still go to eternal fire, so you are preparing for it...

The proofs

There are five short verbal proofs that demonstrate the existence of life after death.

1. If an eight-month-old baby in the womb would become one day younger every day, eventually it would die, which means that death also comes before life.
2. Your body was already on Earth a thousand years ago, but it was completely disintegrated and therefore dead, only to come back to life later from death.
3. When one dies, consciousness becomes nothing because there is nothing after death, but then one should also see a car or a house become nothing.
4. If the dead can only be themselves, they have always been only themselves.
5. Does consciousness reside in the empty spaces in the brain or in the rest of the brain where there is no empty space?

The last proof only becomes clear when one answers the question correctly and draws the right conclusion from it.

The questions

Now that the evidence has been mentioned, the question is which questions are connected to the knowledge of there being life after death.
The main question is who one will be in the next life. Because one has no memories of past lives, it can be said that the next life can go in any direction since it is still completely unknown territory where there are no data and possible statistics available.
What gender will one have? What race will one belong to? What possible hereditary conditions will one have? How disabled will one be? What possible diseases will one have? In what financial state will one be born? Will one be born in a war zone and/or poverty area? Where exactly in the world will one be born and more questions.
These turn out to be the most important questions one can ask oneself.

The realization

When one knows that they are not powerful enough to avoid their own next life, which will be in bad circumstances, there appears to be only one solution.
When everyone on the planet knows that there is life after death, everyone will try to avoid a next bad life and this will succeed because everyone will be a good person, so that there are no more bad people in the next life.
Everyone will also pass on the verbal evidence of life after death to the next generation if such evidence leads a public existence.
That is also the reason why I am making my five short proofs public.

The cover

Perhaps there are those who find that the book cover is misleading because it apparently tells nothing about the theme of life after death.
But the cover refers to the fifth proof because the cover is about mechanical tides. What the moon really needs, according to the rules of logic, to cause the tides.
Compared to how the tides are currently caused, one can determine that currently "nothing" causes the tides, whereas on the cover, a digging arm takes care of it.
One can guess for themselves how much that digging arm weighs and how great a contrast it is with that "nothing".
That is why my short book is dedicated to the music track "Moondance" by Moondog Jr.

Concluding words

Finally, I want to thank you for downloading and reading this short book.
Because of this, you are forever and always aware of the fact that there is life after death, and you will also adjust yourself accordingly.
